'It's an attempt to put pressure oo the new Israeli government, and to use the tunnel affair as an excuse to spread political threats against Israel," Netanyahu said.

According to the senior Israeli official, Israel is going through an Arab "testing period."

"The Arabs are trying to put psychological pressures on us in Lebanon and in the territories, without any connection to the progress in the negotiations. The Palestinians are facing a new situation in which, for the first time, they have to negotiate with us and not get things even before asking for them. They have to choose between adapting themselves to this situation or trying to modify it through pressures," the official

There is concern both about further confrontation today in differ-ent parts of the West Bank as funerals for the four Palestinians killed are held, as well as the character of Moslem prayer services at the Temple Mount tomorrow.

MOSCOW (Reuter) - Russian President Boris Yeltsin was given the go-ahead for heart surgery yesterday and doctors said they were supremely confident the operation would be successful after another six to 10 weeks of preparation.

A high price for a 'hole in a wall'

YESTERDAY'S traumatic shootout in Ramallah was a high price to pay for knocking a hole in a wall. But the problem goes deeper - to the failure of the government to make a partner of the Palestinian Authority during its three months in office.

Unlike the intifada, which began by spontaneous combustion, the sources of yesterday's events were clearly identifiable. Palestinian Authority Chairman Yasser Arafat failed to ignite a riot on the Temple Mount a few weeks ago.

JON IMMANUEL and ARIEH O'SULLIVAN

THOUSANDS of Palestinians vented their rage over the opening of the Hasmonean Tunnel yesterday, clashing with IDF soldiers and Palestinian police in riots that culminated in a deadly shoot-out between soldiers and Palestinian policemen. Three Palestioian policemen and a 15-year-old boy were reported killed in Ramallah.

The violence ceotered around the army's southern Ramallah checkpoint, but rioting also occurred in Hebron, Bethlehem, Gaza and in eastern Jerusalem

More than 240 Palestinians and seven IDF soldiers were wounded in the Ramallah clashes. Later in the day, two Israeli soldiers were hurt when 500 Palestinians stormed troops guarding Rachel's Tomh, in Bethlehem, burling firebombs and burning down trees and wooden road dividers. And late last night, five more soldiers were wounded by gunfire in

Also last night, rocks were thrown at Israeli cars on the new tunnel road between Jerusalem and Gush Etzion, forcing police to close the road.

The army rushed reinforcements to the scene, and as they were suppressing the rioters, an unknown gunman opened fire at the soldiers. Some witnesses said the shots came from an abandoned building and that the gunman emptied a full ammunition clip at the soldiers. But senior IDF officers say the shooting may have started from the mob itself.

The soldiers then returned fire toward the building and the ensuing gun battle reportedly lasted for over an hour, with Palestinian policemen unleashing prolonged hursts of automatic fire at the soldiers, who were firing from treated his wounds and fired back. Later, armed Palestinian policemen in green uniforms and red berets appeared to be trying to disperse demonstrators.

PM promised Clinton to ask Congress to release PA funds

DAVID MAKOVSKY

IN response to a direct request by US President Bill Clinton earlier this month during their White House meeting, Prime Minister Binyamin Netanyahu agreed to phone a leading congressman and urge him to release $10 million in US aid to the Palestinian Authority being withheld since last November, The Jerusalem Post has learned from Israeli govemment sources.

Netanyahu has yet to phone Rep. Benjamin Gillman, chairman of the House International Relations Committee, who suspended funds until PA Chairman Yasser Arafat discloses hidden PLO assets. The reason for the delay is unclear, but some believe it is technical and Netznyahu will soon make the call, thereby keeping his word to

The Netanyahu government has signaled to Washington not to block US aid to the PA for the upcoming fiscal year. The aid consists of an estimated $65 million in grants for infrastructure projects and $10 million to help the PA cover its recurrent costs. This marks a change for Netanyahu, who while in opposition asked members of Congress not to assist the PA.

Gillman was particularly upset that Arafat did not comply with an effort by the congressional auditing arm, the General Accounting Office, which during the summer of 1995 wrote a report on PLO

Police clash with Palestinians in capital, more demonstrations planned for today

Two reported lightly injured in yesterday's protest

PALESTINIAN leaders in Jerusalem plan to again defy a police ban on protests and hold a massive demonstration in the Old City today, near the con-troversial new exit to the Hasmonean turmel on the Via Dolorosa.

Jerusalem's Moslem and Palestinian Authority leaders decided to continue the protests, after clashes yesterday between Palestinian residents and police in and around the Old City.

"If Israel won't close the tunnel, we will have to close it ourselves," said Abed Abu Diyab, a senior PLO activist in Jerusalem. "We will continue our protests until we achieve our aim." Palestinian sources said PA Religious Affairs Minister Hassan Tahbouh and Jerusalem Mufti Akram Sabri were hit in the head with bottles and lightly injured during the disturbances. No

Police and protesters played a cat and mouse in the Old City and Sultan Suleiman for over an hour, with the demonstrations eventually petering out. No arrests were reported. A police spokesman said rubber bullets were used to break up one protest, but there vere oo injuries.

"All we wanted to do was hold a eaceful demonstration, and look what they have done to us," said PA Finance Minister Mohammed Nashashibi, one of the march leaders.

Bonn says support for Israel hinges on peace moves

BONN (Reuter) - Germany said yesterday, a day before a visit by Prime Minister Binyamin Netanyahu, that its support for Israel depended on continued efforts to push ahead with the peace process.

Bonn is normally at pains to stress its good relatious with Israel but the remarks by Helmut Schaefer, state secretary in the Foreign Ministry, were the strongest sigo yet of its concern over the way the peace process has stalled under Netanyahu.

Schaefer told German Radio that Netanyahu's policy statements had taken on "a different quality from what we have supported for several years."

"If promises made to the extreme right in Israel are really implemented, we will have to ask if such policies can still be supported...we can't just say that, whoever rules in Israel, we'll just close our eyes and give our sup-

Schaefer said it was in German interests to try to ensure "that everything that has painstakingly been achieved in the last few years is not sacrificed by people who saddenly come to power and have different political views... "It will have to be made clear to the Israeli premier that to continue the peace process you must bonor treaties signed by the previous government," he said, citing commitments to pull soldiers out of Hehron and discuss the status of east Jerusalem.

Schaefer's comments went far beyond the statements of Foreign Minister Klaus Kinkel after be met Foreign Minister David Levy in Bonn two weeks ago. Kinkel also met Palestinian Chairman Yasser Arafat last

Kinkel had said there was no question of German economic aid to the region being suspended to put pressure on Israel or the Palestinians to advance the peace

But Schaefer suggested this might change if Germany had the impressioo that Israel was not serious about the peace process.

"We have some inflnence inasmuch as we give money and are prepared, if the peace process is contioned, to provide large sums on a long-term hasis to help develop the region...

"We have made commitments hut that assumes that the peace process is pushed forward and doesn't suddenly receive a setback," Schaefer said.

However, he added, the tunnel can only accommodate some 1,200 visitors a day. At this point, he said, there will be no fee for entry to tunnel, which is to be open from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. He said the ministry would try to arrange crowd control.
"We want to remind people that the tunnel will also be open after the holiday," he said. Although crowds are expected throughout the holiday week, he said, the higgest numbers are expected on Monday for the traditional priestly blessing, followed by the reception of the chief rabbis and the deputy religious affairs ministers.

Meanwhile, Tourism Ministry Director-General Shabi Shai told a group of tourism industry leaders vesterday that the ministry had been planning to conduct a major public relations campaign to counter the present slump in tourism, but it would probably cancel such plans.

PA asks Security Council to meet; King Hussein slams Hasmonean Tunnel

THE Palestinian Authority called oo the UN Security Conncil to discuss the violence touched off by the huilding of a new exit to the Hasmonean Tunnel in-Jerusalem's Old City.

In a letter sent Tuesday to the Security Council, Palestinian UN observer Dr. Nasser Kidwa said the turmel's new exit onto Via Dolorosa was "aimed at the Judaization of the city." "In this regard, and given the extremely important religious and spiritual nature of the issue, we call upon the Security Council to take the necessary steps to address this issue and to have the Israeli action reversed," Kidwa said in the letter, made public yesterday. There was oo indication whether the council would agree to formal consultations on the issue. Palestinians clashed with police in Jerusalem after workmen opened the new exit to the tunnel, which is located near the Western Wall.

The Arab League is to meet in Cairo today to discuss the issue, at the Palestinians' request. The one-day session will be held at the level of permanent representatives - the ambassadors of the 22 member states - a league spokesman said yesterday.

Jordan's King Hussein yesterday denounced the action, calling it an infringement of the rights of all Arabs and Moslems.

He called for an international committee to discuss the possible repercussions of the Israeli action, the Gulf News Agency reported.

A Jordanian government statement, carried by the state's Petra news agcocy, condemned the building of the new exit "which undermines the structure of al-Aksa mosque, changes the features of the holy city and harms the feelings of Arahs and Moslems. Jordan called on Israel to stick to international agreements and urged Arab and Islamic states to work to "preserve the holy city and not to harm al-Aksa

In the strongly worded statement, Jordan's Crown Prince Hassan warned Israeli authorities against disregarding Moslems' attachment to Jerusalem.

"Jordan will persist in exerting efforts to spotlight this new political crisis in the life of the holy city," said Hassan, who, a palace spokesman said, has postponed a planned visit to Jerusalem early next month due to "overburdened schedules." In London, Prime Minister Binyamio Netanyahu's spokesman Shai Bazak said Hassan called Netanyahu yesterday seeking an explanation. The prime minister made it clear to him that the tunnel does not go under the Temple Mount. It won't collapse the Temple Mount. It is an incredible historic project," Bazak said.

Bazak said Netanyahu told Hassan the tunnel would benefit all resideots of the Old City, Moslems and Jews alike, and Hassan responded that Israel should make this known.

Peres blames Netanyahu government for riots

SARAH HONIG

ISRAEL is "now at a bad precipice, facing a very dangerous situation," Labor Party leader Shimon Peres told television interviewers last night.

In a long commentary on the riots over the Hasmonean Tunnel, Peres placed the hlame on the Netanyahu government and warned that Israel's relations with Egypt and Jordan are deteriorating dangerously and the day is not far off when this will be the case with Europe too. "We are already feeling this in the economy," he said.

Peres went on to contrast this with the tenure of the Labor government and said that "the last four years were the best in all of Jewish history - so why stop this?" Peres rejected Netanyahu's argument that it was the Peres government which had decided on the opening of the tunnel and that the same riots would have resulted had Peres been the one to give the go-shead.

"I am not sure that is the case," Peres said. "I would have tried to talk with the Palestinians before making any sensitive

Levy: Hostilities won't pressure Israel to change its policies

MARILYN HENRY NEW YORK

THE hostilities in Ramallah will not pressure Israel to retreat from its positions, Foreign Minister David Levy said yesterday at the UN.
"There are those who believe that

Levy arrived in New York yesterday for a weeklong visit, including an address to the 51st session of the UN General Assembly next Thursday. Levy was to meet later yesterday with Turkey's Foreign Minister Tansu Ciller. At a briefing with UN correspondents earlier in the day, Ciller defended Ankara's defense agreements with Israel.

The pacts are "not to be a threat for the region but rather of stability and a source [for] the peace process in the whole area," she said, adding that Turkey's defense-technology transfer agreement with Israel is similar to pacts her state has with other nations.

Turkey also has a year-old trade agree-ment, for natural gas, with Iran. When reminded that the US has legislation that would impose sanctions on states that trade with Teheran, Ciller bristled, noting that Turkey faced severe economic hardships, but had yet to be compensated for $27 hillion in losses stemming from its support of the US-Allied stance in the Gulf War.

Supreme Court doubles sentences for boys who tortured cellmates

EVELYN GORDON

THE Supreme Court has doubled the sentences of three boys who badly abused their cellmates in the Tiberias lockup.

The three, who all have long and varied criminal records, were awaiting trial in the Tiberias lockup in November 1994, and decided to amuse themselves by beating up their 14-year-old cellmate, using fists and a belt. The prison authorities removed the injured boy the next day, but replaced him with another boy, and the three stepped up their activities.

In addition to beating their new cellmate with both helt and fist, they repeatedly forced his head into body hair, extinguished lighted cigarenes on his body and dripped melted plastic bags onto him. As a result, the boy suffered second-degree burns on his chest, back, legs and hands. The three also tried to sodomize him.

In February, the Nazareth District Court convicted the three of causing bodily harm and attempted sodomy, but acquitted them of aggravated battery and obstructing justice. It sectenced two of the boys to two years in prison and the third to one year, saying a harsher sentence would be unfair because the a sink full of water, set fire to his criminals' lousy childhoods were partially to blame for their behavior. Two of the boys had been in institutions for years. One had been abused as a child, a second had tried to commit suicide several times and the third had an alcoholic

The state appealed both the partial acquittal and the sentence, however, saying the extreme brutality of their actions mandated a stiffer sentence.

Justices Shlomo Levine, Mishael Cheshin and Dalia Dorner accepted the state's appeal in full. Once the lower court accepted the victim's testimony, they said, there was no justification for the partial acquittal. But even had the acquittal not been reversed, they added, the sentences were too light for such an appalling crime. They therefore increased the ringleader's sentence from two to four years, and upped the other boys' sentences to three

Strikers at Electrochemical Industries prepare to fight for jobs

EMPLOYEES of the giant and the marked drop in the interna-Electrochemical Industries factory south of Acre are preparing for a protracted strike after a breakdown in negotiations with the management and after the management sent dismissal notices to 111 of the firm's nearly 400 workers.

The Acre branch of the Histadrut yesterday petitioned the Haifa District Labor Court for an injunction to invalidate the letters of redundancy. The court deferred the hearing until Friday morning.

.... The workers stressed that they want to resume negotiations with management over a recovery plan for the firm, which lost NIS 15 million in the first half of this year. Management has blamed the losses on the rising cost of raw materials

tional prices for PVC, the firm's main product.

Managing director Yair Rotem and Senior Vice President Zvika Greengold visited the factory and met with workers yesterday for the first time since the strike began last Thursday, following a breakdown in talks between management and David Kehat, a member of the united works committee at the plant, said the workers were willing to negotiate on the cutbacks.

"The problem is that management: is insisting that all those to be dismissed should be those on collective agreements, as opposed to personal contracts. This is a direct attempt to break the union," he said.

Ethiopian educators to protest lack of budget for educational center

BATSHEVA TSUR

SEVERAL dozen educators from the Ethiopian immigrant commnnity are to hold a vigil outside the Education Ministry in Tel Aviv this morning to put pressure on the government not to close down a special Steering Center designed to advance educational opportunities for young members of the community.

The ministry has not transferred a NIS 5.5 million budget, for the months September-December, to the center "in an effort to dry up its activities," a spokesman for the United Organization of Ethiopian Immigrants, which helped to plan the center, said yesterday.

This means that some 2,400 youngsters from the Ethiopian community, in seven localities, have already been left without informal educational activities in the afternoon and hundreds of others are likely to join them," spokesman David Golan said.

He said the Ethiopian educators opposed the new ministry policy aimed at treating the problems of Ethiopian youth within existing frameworks. "We don't want to be 2 out of 100 but 2 out of 2," he said. 'In places, such as Beersheba, where special efforts have been invested in the Ethiopian pupils since the center was set up two years ago, it is paying dividends."

A plan to increase the number of Ethiopian pupils getting special tutorial aid to 3,000 this year and to 4,000 next year has also been frozen, Golan said.

Education Minister Zevulun Hammer yesterday hastened to assure the community that he had no plans to cut off funds to them.

On the contrary, they will get bigger budgets than before," Hammer said in a statement. But the ministry spokesman said no specific budgets had been fixed, and these would be worked out "when Hammer meets with leaders of the community after the Succot holi-

Downs Syndrome soldiers complete IDF program

WITH uniformed 18 year olds beaming and their parents full of pride, it was nevertheless an IDF graduation ceremony with a difference: the 18 graduates of a one-totwo-year program were born with Downs Syndrome or other serious genetic, developmental or behavioral disorders.

The youngsters, who would ordinarily have been rejected for mili-tary service, served for a year as volunteers on the Anatot base just northeast of Jerusalem. They did work usually carried out by reservists. All were prepared for the . weekly or twice-weekly work at Jerusalem's International Center for Enhancement of Learning Potential (ICELP) and the Hadassah-Wizo of Canada Research Institute, founded and run by Israel Prize winner Prof.

The participants, who get a nominal payment for their work, spend the rest of the week taking an ICELP course as caregivers in old age homes, and many have already been offered jobs.

"This program, which has already produced 100 graduates in three annual rounds, is helping to change the image of the mentally disabled in society in general and [among] the disabled themselves," Feuerstein said. Yeltsin's surgery approved but delayed

MOSCOW - Russian President Boris Yeltsin will undergo triple or quadruple bypass surgery in six to 10 weeks, and will remain in a hospital or clinic until then, his surgeons announced yesterday.

While dispelling speculation that surgery would have to be canceled because of Yeltsin's poor health, the announcement effectively means Russia will remain without an active leader for months to come.

Russian cardiologist Renat Akchurin, expected to lead the operating team, told a news conference that the delay could boost Yeltsin's prospect of survival close to 100

"If we operate now, I would say the chance is about 80 percent, but we hope that in six weeks the percentage would be close to 100," Akchurin said.

The doctors, who met Yeltsin in Russia's exclusive Central Clinical Hospital, said that the 65-year-old Russian president needed an operation, but they were confident that he could return to a normal way of life. American specialist Michael DeBakey, who joined in the consultations, said the president will need another two months to recover from the operation. DeBakey said he should be able to resume "full normal activity" after the operation.

Doctors said the delay is necessary because Yeltsin's beart muscle is damaged and needs time to heal. The president will be able to do paperwork and see visitors while he's resting. But the delay is certain to prompt angry demands for Yeltsin to resign by the Communist-led opposition, which bas already called for him to step down if his work load has to be cut. Mikhail Gorbachev, the last president of the Soviet Union, called on Yeltsin to resign in a radio interview yesterday. "The way things are going. [Yeltsin] must resign," Gorbachev said of his old political sparring partner.

Gorbachev said Russia could not be "left a hostage of unclear, troubled times."

US naval analyst charged with spying ALEXANDRIA, Virginia - A civilian computer expert working for naval intelligence was charged yesterday with passing at least 50 secret documents to his native South Korea.

Robert Chaegon Kim, 56, of Sterling. Virginia was arrested Tuesday night at Fort Myer while attending an Armed Forces Day reception sponsored by the South Korean Embassy, officials said.

Kim was employed by the same Navy intelligence center in Suitland, Maryland, that employed Jonathan Pollard, who is serving a life term for spying for Israel.

He handed over classified information, many with "secret" or the "top secret" designations, to Back Dong-II, a naval attache for the South Korean government, an affidavit released in US District Court said. He also is accused of giving South Korea "above topsecret" documents containing political and military intelligence about North Korea and other Asian-Pacific nations.

Armenian police fire on opposition demonstrators

YEREVAN, Armenia (AP) -Security forces opened fire on opposition demonstrators yesterday in the Armenian capital, wounding an unknown number of people protesting the outcome of he presidential election.

Violence broke out in the evening, after an estimated 40,000 people gathered outside the building housing the Central Election Commission in downtown Yerevan. It was the third demonstration in as many days by people accusing President Lev Ter-Petrosian of winning re-election through fraud in Sunday's election. Security forces used tear gas and water cannon on the crowd, then opened fire when demonstrators failed to disperse. Demonstrators fought back, grabbing for the guns and clubs carried by police and soldiers from the internal security service, the successor to the KGB.

Afghan rebels close to Kabul

ISLAMABAD (Reuter) The Afghan Taleban militia battled to the eastern edge of Kabul yesterday, threatening the survival of President Burhanuddin Rabbani's government.

Taleban sources said the rebels had captured Pul-i-Charici village on the outskirts of the city, as well as the military academy.

Government sources in Kabul confirmed the Taleban were at the gates of the city, but denied the military academy had fallen. The Taleban said fighting had moved on to the customs house area, only five kilometers from the city.

Minister Nabil Shaath,

There may not be a shadow of truth in the Palestinian claims about Israel's tunnel, but it served to make a point. The issue, PA councilwoman Hanan Ashrawi said, is "not to allow Netanyahu to continue his deception that the peace process is alive and well, while on the other hand be is doing everything possible to destroy it.

The sight of Jerusalem Mayor Ehud Olmert on TV hurrowing in the tunnel with religions devotion infuriated many Palestinians, while the sight of Arafat's deputy Mahmoud Abbas meeting yesterday in a backslapping meeting with Tel Aviv Mayor Ronni Milo sbowed that the path to better relations is still open. Netanyahu has reached the fork in the road.

Buying a car by

bidding has its bonuses

Every Wednesday, the Hehrew "sell high" and "buy low." All too dailies publish the tender for that week. Bids can be submitted from that Wednesday until Friday - when the lot is open to the puhlic. Prospective huyers must suhmit 10% of the sum of the bid (e.g. if you want to hid NIS 20,000 for a particular car, you must dish out NIS 2,000 up

According to the Nitza Holtzman public relations firm which handles Maman, the method for transacting these ten-ders is geared towards ensuring the integrity of the sales.

Bids must be submitted in closed envelopes. Each hidder is given a client number. The number and the amount of the bid are fed into a computer. The computer then releases a printout on which the hids, the client oumbers, and the ratio of the bids to the estimated value of the cars - determined by a professional assessor - are

Only later are the names of the bidders also fed into the computer, to form a cross-reference between the client number and his name. The advantage of purchasing a vehicle in this manner is the price. It is sometimes possible to get a car for half its market value. It is even possible that the car will be in good working order. It is especially worthwhile for the mechaoically inclined, who are good at judgiog the condition of an engine on sight alone.

It is also worthwhile for the notso-mechanically inclined, in the event that the price they end up paying is less than the cost of a similar car plus the cost of installing a new engine. For this reason, it is a good idea to find out the cost of heavy repairs for a parricular model before hidding. The disadvantage is the bother.

Even after conducting sufficient research, and after scanning the Hebrew newspapers Wednesdays to find a model you're interested in huying, there is still no guarantee that your hid will be higher than others.

The risk of purchasing an automobile without really knowing whether you're getting a lemon or a peach is obvious. But for those for whom the temptation to "outsmart" the market outweighs the risk ... happy honking.

Teaching hotel hospitality

HAIM SHAPIRO

LEANORA Yachikov was a Russian teacher in Russia.

In Israel she hopes to become a hotel manager.

Yachikov is one of 230 students at the Tiberias and Galilee Hotel School at the Tiberias Holiday Inn. The 27-year-old mother of two from Safed admits that at this point such a thought remains in the realm of fantasy, but she believes that if her desire is strong enough, anything is possible.

"It all depends on me," she says. Gila Kahana-Ben Margi is director of the school, which is sponsored by the Labor Ministry, the Tourism Ministry, Africa-Israel Hotels and Resorts, and the Tiberias Municipality. She says that the students include demobilized soldiers and the unemployed, hut many of the students are immigrants and the school is interested in attracting more immigrants, including those from Englishspeaking countries.

In the two years that the school has been in existence, she says, about 450 students, from as far away as Afula and Metulia, have completed courses preparing them for work as reception clerks, chefs and housekeepers. A small number have also finished the prestigious managers' course, in which Yachikov is enrolled.

In follow-up programs, the school has learned that 90 percent of the graduates in the chefs' course who wanted to work as chefs have found jobs. Of these, $5 percent are employed in hotels.

Among those presently taking the chefs' course is Alexander Vidvitzky, a 35-year-old immigrant from Ukraine, where he already worked as a chef. The procedures

In the two years that the Tiberias and Galilee Hotel School has operated, about 450 students have completed courses preparing them for work as reception clerks, chefs, and housekeepers.

in Israel are very different, he says. The main difference between the training he received in the former Soviet Union and in Israel is that in the FSU the students were very disciplined he says

But he is anxious to learn and to start working. "I have to work to live," says Vidvitzky, who has three children. "It won't hurt me to work harder. But the best thing is that I'm here."

Receotly, Kahana said, the Jewish Agency organized teams (which included representatives of the school) to go to the former Soviet Union, France, the US and Canada, to interest prospective immigrants in studying at the school, with an eye to going into hotel work.

Asked whether the immigrants would actually find work, she noted that the Holiday Inn chain itself needed about 1,000 new workers in its expanding network throughout the country.

"We can't promise them work, but we do tell them that if they want to work in a hotel and they do well in the course, the chain will snap them up," Kahana says.

The candidates are interviewed in their home countries to determine if they are suited for hotel work. Of some 70 young people who were interviewed in France recently, 30 were accepted and about 25 actually arrived and have been in Israel for about a month. The immigrants are now attending an ulpan for six months and will then live in the Tiberias Absorption Center while attending the course.

There are already some 15 immigrants from France who have attended the course and are now working as pastry chefs and reception clerks. Another group is expected to arrived in June 1997.

The Jewish Agency provides scholarships for about half of the hotel school fees, which range from NIS 2,000 to NIS 5,000. In addition to the financial aid, one of the factors which makes the program attractive is the relatively short training period, Kahana

Another is the relative ease with which it is possible to find a job in the hotel industry. For immigrants from the West, another incentive is the that they already speak English or French.

Kahana admits that salaries in the hotel industry are not particularly high. "We tell them that salaries are not like those in hitech industries, hut we also tell them that promotions come very fast for good people," she says.

Checks, whether in plaids or tiny houndstooth designs, are a sure thing for this and every winter.

Check this out

OME winter, you can bet your sweet life that checks will figure somewhere on the fashion merry-go-round. Sometimes they are tiny houndstooth checks; sometimes they are big, bold plaids; and often, they are somewhere between the two. This year, you'll find them all, including the popular Black Watch tartan, which resurfaces every couple of years.

Checks in various sizes and colors add a Gaelic flavor to the winter wardrobe, and as long as they are trims or only one of the items in mix-and-match dressing, they are just fine. But some designers are going overboard with ensembles of plaid coats, jackets, vests, shirts and pants, which are just too much, especially

An unsuccessful opening

RIME Minister Binyamin Netanyahu was right when he said that no matter when the new exit to the Western Wall tunnel was opened, it would have been a problem. It has often been said, however, that timing is everything, and timing the tunnel's opening for this week was simply counterproductive.

The need for such an exit to the Hasmonean Tunnel is beyond dispute: Until now, the narrowness of the tunnel, which runs along the western edge of the Temple Mount complex. allowed only 7,000 visitors a year to the site, which offers a view of the entire length of the Western Wall. Now that there is a new exit to the north, some 400,000 tourists are expected

Logic would dictate that the area's Arab shopowners - who have never recovered from the lingering effects of the intifada, which drove tourists away from the Old City's Moslem quarter - would be pleased at such a buge increase in the number of visitors, a point made by several government officials yesterday. But it should have been obvious that emotions would overwhelm logic in any matter concerning the Temple Mount area.

Yesterday's riots in Ramallah and Jerusalem provided the most violent example of the passions that the smallest incident in the Old City can spark. That Palestinian Police fired at IDF soldiers is particularly distressing, and the government must strongly protest this behavior to the Palestinian Authority. The diplomatic outcry is also worrisome, with even Jordan's Crown Prince Hassan issuing a statement, calling the move "a provocation to Arab and Moslem feelings around the world." Similar statements will no doubt emerge from today's Arab League meeting, called for by the Palestinians to discuss the issue.

Claims by some Palestinians that the opening of the tunnel's new exit threatens Moslem holy places and endangers the foundations of the Aksa Mosque are obvious nonsense, and only serve to further fan the flames of unrest. The tunnel does not run near the Temple Mount and does not touch any Arab property. What the new exit does represent is this government's determination not to remain passive in the political battle for Jerusalem. The question remains, however, as to whether it is adopting the right

The tunnel's exit could have been blasted open months ago, after the previous government reached an agreement on the matter in January with the Palestinian Authority. Under this accord, Israel permitted Moslem prayers at Solomon's Stables on the Temple Mount, in return for Israel opening the tunnel without Palestinian protest. Soon after, however, the wave of bus bombings occurred, and the Labor government decided not to open the tunnel fearing this would lead to an escalation of violence in Jerusalem.

With the benefit of hindsight, Jerusalem Mayor Ehud Olmert is correct in criticizing the previous government for not opening the tunnel immediately after the agreement was signed, but whether it was wise to go ahead and do so now is debatable. Olmert has argued that he wanted the exit open in time for the Succot holiday, and the expected influx of local and foreign tourists to the capital. But scenes of rioting and stones being thrown at Western Wall worshipers are not the best advertisement for a holiday in Jerusalem.

Moreover, these past few weeks have been marked by tension with almost all of Israel's neighbors and negotiating partners. Relations with Egypt have descended to the lowest form of mud-slinging on Egypt's part, while the tension in the north, following Syria's redeployment in Lebanon, has not fully dissipated. The deadly clashes between the IDF and the Hizbullah have resumed. And despite Netanyahu's recent meeting with PA leader Yasser Arafat, progress on the Palestinian track is frozen, with the details of the IDF redeployment in Hebron still unclear.

Given this gloomy setting, the government might have considered refraining from generating additional friction with the Arab world, particularly with the Cairo economic summit so

A previous attempt to open an exit to the tunnel in 1988 led to riots throughout the territories, an international ootery and a government decision to block the opening. Despite the hage changes in the Middle East since then, the issue of Jerusalem is still a sensitive one. It is puzzling that the prime minister thought that the reaction to a new opening for the Hasmonean Tunnel would be any different today than it was

Same time, same place

NE would have to be as innocent as a lamb to write off Cairo's barrage of insults aimed at our prime minister as an attack of late-summer madness. For the offensive remarks were carefully orchestrated to time with a Suez Canal crossing maneuver carried out by a record number of well-trained Egyptian troops.

And, apparently in harmony with a decision taken by Cairo long before, Damascus reactivated Hizbullah attacks in soothern

Shortly before, Syrian commando troops were dispatched with suspicious speed to the critical cease-fire line near Mount Hermon; and other soldiers were redeployed to the Bekaa Valley.

The insults flung at Binyamin Netanyahu by the Egyptian press who take their cue from President Mubarak's current state of mind - grow more vitriolic by the day. One editor, known as a close friend of the present-day "Pharaoh of the Nile," as Cairo diplomats say Mubarak refers to himself in private, was quoted as saying that "Netanyahu should have his ears, nose and tongue cut mocked. Using bitter rhetoric Mubarak, ever-mindful of having been Egyptian Air Force commander in the Your Kipper war, asked journalist Aharon Barnea, who was interviewing him for TV's Channel 2: "And is Arik Sharon still eating so much? Is he as fat as ever?" Mubarak then claimed that Sharon had been opposed to the peace treaty with Egypt - a fabri-cation. Egyptians well know that Sharon was the commander who crossed the canal and defeated Mubarak and other generals under President Sadat. Barnea allowed the president's mocking remarks to go unchallenged. But not the Egyptians. Their TV people seized upon the interview program and, in a rare act, aired it twice for Cairo audiences. Al-Ahram said yesterday: Netanyahu should be sent to a mental institution."

The venomous onslanght from Cairo has been reported worldwide as being a "war of words." But it is only one side that is warring." No Israeli leaders have been paying Mubarak back in the and war against Israel. A clue to what really lies behind Egypt's verbal bombardment of Israel was provided by Egyptian Defense Minister Mohammed Hussein Tantawi, who last week masterminded the most ambitious maneuvers ever in Egypt. Their aim was to demonstrate bow fast off."

That's worrying. But It isn't only Netanyahu who's most worrying for Israel is the tact that the Egyptians now have modern American tanks and warplanes and need no looger rely on less efficient Soviet armaments.

Asked by journalists why Egypt was carrying out this provocative activity that constitutes a breach of the peace agreement, Tantawi responded with a soldier's hluntness: "We are concerned about Israel attacking Egypt with nonconventional weapons."

WE WONDER about the reaction in Europe were the German army suddenly to cross the Rhine in a massive "maneuver" following a string of German insults burled at the French prime minister. And all because of apprehensions over that country's large nuclear arsenal as compared to Germany's nonexistent one.

Would Western leaders disregard the incident as totally as the world has ignored Egypt's continuing belligerence over the past months?

Allied with Egypt's moves is the Syrian decision to redeploy crack offensive troops close to Mount Hermon, from where Syria launched its surprise attack against Israel on Yom Kippur 23 years ago.

Hafez Assad and Mubarak have held at least two meetings over the past 12 months. Did they coordinate these moves on those sions to Syria over the Golan

This sudden passionate Arab support for Yasser Arafat looks suspicious, for the precisely-coordinated Egyptian and Syrian bel-ligerence looks and sounds as though it has been in the works for some time.

The explanation comes from Tantawi's apprehension over what he sees as the real danger facing his armed forces should they choose to attack Israel.

Egypt's problem? In the event of Arab military attack it believes Israel has the capacity to launch a nuclear response.

Complaints about Israel's nuclear capacity were aired repeatedly during the days of the Rabin and Peres administration, while their moves to grant Palestinian rights were greeted with benign smiles of approval.

The complex military maneuvers Syria and Egypt are carrying out take a long time to plan. It's clear they haven't simply been cooked up during the few months since Netanyahu took over the reins in Jerusalem. It was all worked out long before the Likud leader came to power.
Thus Arab excuses that

Syria and Egypt are unsheathing their swords to press the Israelis to make major concessions to Arafat and to Damascus over the Golan are merely a smokescreen.

The Arabs' real intention was underlined by Egyptian Deputy Foreign Minister Fathi Shazli this week. Shazli said Israel could never be a "pivotal player in the Middle East since it has a historical tole which can only be seen as negative in every way."

This posturing by the armies of Syria and Egypt comes as a sobering reminder to Israelis. It is the exact replica of those countries' movements prior 10 their onslaught against the Jewish state in 1973

True, it's 23 years on But it's around the same time, the same

Forthwith: The New York Times, Adolph S. Ocbs Street, Times Square, New York Ochs' leadership began on August 19, 1896, the start of an era that would see the paper rise from also-ran to institution. Founded in 1851, the Times was near bankruptcy when Ochs purchased controlling ownership for $75,000 His first edition carried a one-paragraph announcement that Ochs, of Chananooga, Tennessee, had become publisher. In a signed editorial, he outlined his plans for a newspaper that would "give the news impartially, without fear or favor." He would soon launch the Sunday Magazine and the Saturday Review of Books and Art. Ochs coined the slogan. "All the News That's Fit to Print," which has appeared on the Times front

ONDAY morning, You Kippur, Jerusalem had a quiet that was almost tangible. Nothing but the sound of a few kids on bicycles and a couple of men having a difference of opinion. It was what I'd come here from England for

I walked to a yeshiva in Geula. where I sat squared off within white curtains in the women's section. Here atonement was serious business. There was solid concentration, interrupted only by small children tugging at holiday

Back in the sun, I walked home across a deserted Jaffa Road down which people were strolling as if it were a country lane. The only traffic was two ambulances and a police car.

Resting in the cool of my friend's Nahlaot apartment I watched the brightness of the day begin to fade. Fighting a rumbling stomach and parched throat, I decided to go ahead with a pact I had made with myself: to go to the Western Wall for Ne ila, the Concluding Service.
For a Jew in search of her roots.

raised in a secular Diaspora society, Genla seemed great, but surely the Kotel was the core.

I'd come this far. How could I miss out on Jerusalem's beart at this most auspicioos time of the Jewish year?

Setting my feeble feet firmly on the floor I filled a water bottle in anticipation of 6:12 p.m. and psyched myself up for the balf-hour

Approaching the Wall I passed crowds of people wandering about outside the railings or just standing around. Maybe, I thought, they weren't able to get near the Wall itself. But in fact access was quite easy.

Just as I remembered from the past there was that sense of being enfolded as I came close, treading on scribbled notes and finding my

Around me women murmured and wept. Beyond the partition, the sound of one minyan rose above another.

But then, as the sun sank and the praying intensified, I became aware of something equally insistent - continuing flashes of light.

IT WAS nothing to do. I'm sad to say, with the opening of the gates of mercy. Nor was it the onset of a blinding migraine. It was the flashlights of tourist cameras.

I looked backwards, up at the crowd I'd imagined was coming to the Kotel, like me, to pray. But all I could see was a gawking theater audience.

We worshipers down at the Wall were on display, observed by sightseers and onlookers.

The Western Wall show: flashing cameras, prying videos, worshipers on display pointed at, the object of cameras and the prey of videos.

I could imagine some entertaining evening back bome in Germany. Holland, or America, the great holiday video show. Look - a weird religious festival. The end of some fast day. How amazing: Jews praying!

Soon shofars blasted out from every direction, the sky turned inky, the stars seemed to blink with relief. Gradually the sounds diminished. Some young girls were doing a few rounds of dance. The tourists jostled for space, took more snaps.

The men at the Wall began to dance their own joyful steps. The videos couldn't get enough of it. I joined the crowds walking away toward sustenance, beading back into the darkness of the Russian Compound and Ethiopia Street and across mto Genia As I downed milky coffee and cookies I told my friends about my irritation and dismay. "But really," said Ya acov, with a twinkle in his eye. The tourists were the illusion. They were the picture show. It was the people praying at the Wall who were the living reality." Whatever, come Succet, I know where I'll be. There aren't any videos poking round Geula, no clicking shots of women sighing and celebrating within their curtained enclosures.

If only we could go back to the old days at the Wall, when there was no open courtyard for tourists to take their gawping stance - just a narrow passageway for people to do what the place was intended

Till then, I'll be visiting the Wall during the only time it can come into its spiritual own as a totally tourist-free zone - at midnight, when the rains come.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

THE DERSHOWITZ COLUMN

Sir, - After reading your Sunday offering of a selection of US syndicated columns (American Outlook, September 8), I am compelled to comment on Alan Dershowitz's article which, though it ostensibly purports to be in support of Justice Barak, reads, in effect, more like a diatribe against the "Orthodox" in general, and the Orthodox rabbinate in particular, Alan, of whom I have always had reason to be proud, seems to have overstepped here, which is probably attributable to the perception that, as he claims, there are many among the Orthodox for whom religious authority supersedes that of the secular establishment. This, of course, does not sit well with jurists who have opted to make secular law their raison d'être and whose own position, as well as authority and status are thus threatened. It must, of course, be acknowledged that is indeed true - and always has been - that, for the religious person, religious belief and doctrine are overriding and supreme - that is why the pilgrims came to America. It is also true that religious citizens are generally the most lawabiding in any society; furthermore. it may justifiahly be claimed that what is right, just, wise and true in the laws of Western states, is often ultimately derived from religious ly from the Bible and Talmud. Dershowitz castigates those who use what he calls "hate speech" visà-vis Barak, yet he does not hesitate (in the foreign, US press), to refer to Jewish religious leaders and rabbis as "ayatollahs," and to suggest that it was they who caused the assassination of our late prime minister.

Alan also repeats, even assumes as fact, a number of allegations that were left unproven during the lengthy investigations of the Shamgar Commission. There were no rabhis who, in fact, sanctioned violence against the late prime minister, nor are there those - I am willing to wager - who in any way would sanction or condone violence against Barak Finally, it should be noted that the use of the term "fundamentalist" for halachic Jews (those who follow traditional Halacha) is both offensive and inappropriate. There are indeed, sects or factions in other religions who call themselves, and are called, "fundamentalist." This is not true in Judaism, and the atsempt to introduce and tar Israel's Orthodox with this term, or to maligh them by comparison to fundamentalists elsewhere is

LAW-ABIDING PEDESTRIAN

Sir, - I had just read Greer Fay Cashman's article of September 11 ("Red cross") when I went for a walk in Jerusalem. I do not jaywalk; I was brought up in England to be law and statute - and most especial-law-abiding. As I tried to cross a side-road from the main road at a traffic light, I found that the car in the lane closest to me had seen his amber light and drew up slowly and carefully but the man in the next lane, who was far away when the first car stopped, immediately accelerated. Had I stepped out smartly, what would have happened? I can provide many more instances which were more dangerous and happened to me. I once found myself crossing. with the green light, on part of the main road (to the central island) when a large van decided to do a Uturn on to me inslead of turning left past me, as he was permitted to to.

On another occasion I found my-among the heavy traffic hecause there are drivers who need sidewalks to park their car. This is not necessarily because there are no public parking spaces available, but because the drivers are too lazy to take the extra few seconds. It is only too obvious at times when there is no likelihood at all of a traffic warden appearing. In the early evening. the sidewalk opposite a large supermarket is blocked with cars deposited higgledy-piggledy, though the market has its own car park (presumably this would entail an extra second of maneuvering) and there are empty public spaces just meters away (an extra minute's walk). There are faults on both sides. Ms. Cashman, and we must work to eliminate both sorts.

RECYCLING DUMPSTERS

Sir. - I live in Jerusalem. Last week, I went to Rehov Hakablan in Har Not in order to drop off plastic bottles for recycling. I discovered to my regret that there are no longer any recycling dumpsters there for plastic bottles, glass bottles and batteries. I called the municipality and the official there told me that there were no longer any such dumpsters in the entire city.

The earth is in danger of being destroyed by the greenhouse effect. Therefore, it is necessary to recycle everything that is recyclable. Indeed, there are a lot of recycling dumpsters here for paper and also a few for cardboard, but there are none for anything else.

In every Western country, every neighborhood has recycling dumpsters for paper, cardboard, aluminum, glass, plastic and hatteries. We are a modern country. It is time that we should have these in all our neighborhoods too. GAIL TURNER

لكذا من ألاصل

Sourna Daneshvar came across the English translation of Le Désert while studying at the University of Chicago. Captivated by Loti's dramatic diary of the stark desert and its primitive inhabitants, Dancshvar began to research the author's trip: "I was interested in the personal experience of going through the area that has played such an important role in the religions."

Born of Shi'ite Moslem origins in Iran, Daneshvar is more of an international hybrid American graduate student who is precociously aware of the world around him. His resolve befits a Marine officer (which was another common attribute that attracted him to Loti). Daneshvar's research led him oo a two-year quest which culminated in the replication of Loti's journey, "I wanted to compare Loti's experiences with ours, to see the changes that have been made," he explained.

His enthusiasm managed to hook fellow student Sheridan Bell, an American Protestant who had lived in different places around the world with his diplomat family. Bell had studied East Asian history, religions in China, and 16th-century Christianity and Judaism. By age 17 (eight years ago), he had traveled the Chinese deserts. "This spoke to me of a different culture, of a oew experience." Bell said. "Loti was searching for something; perhaps I would find a better understanding of where I exist in the world."

If Daneshvar's expectations can be described as pursuing the romance of the desert, and Bell the existential aspect, then Oren Paynton, the Israeli member of the trio, can be said to be the most pragmatic in his expectations: "I was interested in the Sinai and the Beduin."

Paynton had traveled to the Sinai wheo he was 10. Fifteen years later, he is of an age where he is old coough to remember the cled in the trilogy beginning with part of Israel. "I want to see how fear if you wander away and lose the political situation affected them. Who are the Beduin of today?"

Paynton, a long-faced Nicholas Cage look-alike, has the quiet assurance of a person about to begin life. A student of communications and psychology, he met Daneshvar at the Hehrew University. Le Désert piqued Paynton's interest. "I wanted to see what happened in the last 100 years [since Loti's records]."

PIERRE LOTI was the pen name of Julien Viaud (1850-1923). Part of the French Decadent movement at the end of the last century, Loti was eccentrie in his tastes and actions. In addition to his military career, he was also an acrohat, a lover of costumes, women (such as Sarah Bernhardt and the queen of Romania) and the East. Though he was raised a French

Huguenot, he was strangely attracted to Islam and decided to travel to Jerusalem. He claimed that the hardships of the desert journey would prepare his soul for God, though, like the three men reenacting his journey, he was probably also enchanted hy the adventure and mystery of the East. Loti traveled with two friends and a caravan of 20 eamels and Beduin, who prepared their tenus, the food and water. and led them in relative comfort and safety through the desert, dealing with obstacles such as negotiating with local sheikhs for permission to cross through their Loti sketches a ouanced portrait of the Beduin: simple people who pray, sing around the campfires at night, are protective of their guests and are untouched by the outside world. On the other hand, they have their own desert code and in their dealings with Lou's group they were often conniving. But Loti's benevolent attitude ("Being rohbed, pillaged and hilked, all this was foreseen, as long as they doo't attack us personally, we have to let them have their way") stems from the fact that these were not his main focus.

His main concern was experiencing the desert landscape, and it is in this heightened awareness of bis surroundings that he finds something of his epiphany: "And Beduin of the Sinai when it was now you feel an almost religious sight of the camp. But in order m be absolutely alone in the hlack emptiness, you separate yourself from your little handful of living things lost in this dead land. The stars shine in the cosmic void but are eloser and more accessible than before. In this desert the stars are more permanent and ageless; looking at them here, one feels closer to understanding their inconceivable infinity; one almost has the illusion of truly being united with universal permanence and

A HUNDRED years after the original, the three travelers, exhausted and exalted from their 22-day trip. had found the desert and its inhabitants quite different from those described in Le Désert. Upon arrival at Suez, they were greeted with three camels and four Beduin, as opposed to the four camels and one guide they had requested; along the way they had to take more Bedoin, and much of the time the three walked on foot and let the Beduin ride the camels because it was faster. Moreover, their guides didn't want to go Loti's route or pace (eight hours a day), they wanted to take the men on the typical safari route (four hours a day) that they give most tourists.

"A hundred years ago it wasn't like that," says Paynton, who, from the time he contacted the Arah tour guides by fax, was disturbed by the amount of commercialism that the tourist industry had introduced to the Beduin lifestyle. "It makes me angry because I liked the Sinai when there weren't tourists, and you saw the Beduin from within." In the last 20 years, the Egyptians have aggressively settled the desert. developing tourist resorts and running in on the Beduin's turf, making them a minority in the area.

It was in the little things like the fact that the Beduin prayed only while they were on the trip and oot within the camps, that Paynton saw a loss of national character. "It's a facade. They are role playing," Paynton says. Though he hlames Loti and other traveling writers such as Lawrence of Arabia for opening this pristine community to the world, he admits, The thing is to get there first. I'm jealous because they got to enjoy it, unlouched." He adds. "But it's still a nice place." Indeed, his hundreds of photographs cataloging their trip portray the varied landscape that Loti had described a century ago."

Bell, who was disappointed by the experience of the Beduin, was pleasantly surprised at the contrast to Loui's desolate descriptions. The desert has so much more life than I expected: oases, water holes, hushes, trees, bees," he says. "The changing colors of the desert bombard the senses."

The group was very much alone in the desert, when they finally got off the tourist path. They tried to keep as much as possible to Loti's route, from Suez to Serabit to St.

and finally to Agaba.

Daneshvar also didn't find what he expected, hut he didn't think that it was because the desert had changed so drastically but rather due m the fact that Loti's portrayal was overly romantic: "Loti's was an internal Orientalist journey. He had an idea and he wanted to keep that idea and not perpetuate anything that would take that away." Daneshvar says.

Was the two-year quest worthwhile? Daneshvar says it was.
"I'm glad I did it. I developed my own romantic view of the Sinai not necessarily described by Loti," he admits. "I learned to separate fact from fiction."

Dear Raum. Once o week, a group of divorced women like myself - goes out to dinner together. This has been helpful for all of us to air out our difficulties, and enjoy the company of other women going through o similar process. It's also, I hate to admit, a way to be "out there" looking for male companionship.

My problem is guilt. One of these women with whom I enjoy spending my weekly evening out became very interested in a man who introduced himself to us one evening, and who has since been hovering around our table. She confided this to me in secret. But then this man made it very clear that he wants to take me out on o proper date. I have refused twice so far, but he is persistent. Guilty Girlfriend

Somewhere in Israel Dear GG.

Apparently, you are interested in this man a bit yourself. Otherwise, the only problem you'd have is trying to assist your female friend in lowering her hopes. But whether you wish to date this man or not, you will probably feel a lot less tornired if you tell your friend the truth about his having asked you. Undoubtedly, fear of her envy or hurt is preventing you from doing so. Yet, rather than preventing hurt, you are managing to prolong your own ill ease. Furthermore, however interested your friend may be in this man, keep in mind that she currently has ear Ruthie, no relationship with him. Therefore, the only trust you are betraying is that which she may have in your honesty.

> Dear Ruthie, I have a buddy who is always short of cash, and who always borrows from me. He then forgets - or otherwise fails - to reimburse me. It would make me feel like o cheapskate to remind him that he owes me money. Is there a delicate way I can go about it? Cash Conscious

Los Angeles . Dear CC,

It is hard to be delicate with someone who exhibits aggressive behavior. However valuable this buddy of yours may be to you, he is nevertheless putting you in an uncomfortable position on a regular basis. The fact that you feel like a "cheapskate" in spite of your gener-ous behavior should tell you something about the dynamic going on between you and your friend.

There is nothing indelicate about asking to be reimbursed, if you do so in a polite tone of voice. But if straightforwardness is not an option, you may have to resort to forgetting your wallet when you spend time with this person... or m forgetting your friend when out with your wallet. Otherwise, you may find yourself reaching the conclusion that friendships which cause this kind of anxiety aren't worth their weight in your gold,

Government to study IBA privatization

DAVID HARRIS

PRIME Minister Binyamin Netanyahu has ordered in-depth reviews of activities of the nation's electronic media, including levels of advertising on all channels and the possible privatization of the Israel Broadcasting Authority.

Before leaving for Europe, Netanyahu asked Communications Minister Limor Livnat to present proposals to the cabinet for the restructuring of radio and television, including more advertising.

Companies will welcome the possibility of advertising their products on Channel 1, according to Dudu Gilboa, who until last month headed Israel Television's news department and now works for Irina Shalmor Public Relations.

"Advertisers will gain the fruits with lower prices," he said, pointing out that while higher ratings are guaranteed on Channel 2, some firms would look to target an audience watching quality programs.

However, he says Channel 2 will vigorously resist such a move, even considering an appeal to the High Court of Justice.

There is a need "to carry out a new investigation of all areas of the electronic media in Israel, with the aim of giving expression to the multifaceted cultures in its pluralist society," Netanyahu said in a com-

He has also asked Tel Aviv University Cinema and Television department head Arnon Zukerman to head a committee, which will consider possible legal and structural changes in the IBA, and their subsequent impact on the communications industry in general.

A second committee, with an as yet unnamed chairman, will also be established to examine ways of increasing Jewish values in Israel's radio broadcasts.

"Currently, Channel 2 and the cable stations are monopolies, yet at the same time in competition with each other," Zukerman said. "We want to encourage increased competition but to ensure the preservation of public service

While Netanyahu and Livnat have made clear their support for the IBA's privatization, the prime minister is not insisting that the Zukerman committee recommend the sale of the state-run company.

The committee, which met for the first time on Tuesday, will consider wholesale and partial privatization, or retaining IBA in the public sector, said Zukerman.

The Zukerman committee will report in six months.

The $230m. is part of a comprehensive deal between IAI and the banks. Under this deal, the banks will give the company an eightyear, $330m. loan, with a two-year current outstanding loans. They will also lend IAI $120m. in new money and release the funds the firm had deposited as collateral.

In return, the banks will get a lien on all of IAI's assets, and a comptroller appointed by the banks will oversee the company's operations.

The state, in addition to providing the $230m. to guarantees, will increase the company's shareholder equity by $122m., of which $85m. will come from converting loans given in 1995-96 into grants.

The guarantee for the Galaxy project was demanded by the US firm, which is investing $50m. in a joint venture to produce and market the plane, It is to be paid if IAI fails to produce a working model of the plane and get it approved by the US Federal Aviation Authority by the company cannot pay its half. The guarantees were approved with only one negative vote, from Michael Kleiner (Likud), who charged that the "recovery plan" appeared to be no such thing, and that the company seemed likely to be asking the committee for more money in another few months.

"It's unreasonable to approve such high sums when they haven't even shown us the light at the end of the tunnel," he said.

However, many of the MKs who voted in favor, such as Avi Yehezkel (Labor) and Haim Oron (Meretz), expressed the same reservations.

"The committee simply had no choice," Oron said. "Failure to approve [the guarantees] would halt the recovery process and lead to the company's liquidation."

"I'm giving IAI a chance," he said. "In my opinion, with the plan as it stands now, they can operate the company, progress and even achieve good results."

In addition to the guarantees approved yesterday, IAI has already received some $475m. worth of government guarantees, including $75m. for the Amos satellite and $320m. for a previous round of early retirements.

In addition, the government has promised it S410m, worth of guarantees to upgrade fighter planes for the Turkish Air Force, though this deal has not yet been signed. Steve Rodan adds:

IAI director-general Moshe Keret said the company's cash flow problem stemmed from a decision by local banks in February 1995 to reduce their credit line from $330m. to $110m. Moreover, some of the funds that arrived to IAI were diverted for collateral.

"So, we were missing this money until the agreement," Keret said. "It took longer than expected. Now. the approval by Knesset means we can repay our suppliers."

Keret said IAI's debt to its suppliers, as well as the cost of the loan guarantees, totals less than $200m.

Arab states agree to cross-list shares

BEIRUT (Reuter) - The Lebanese, Egyptian and Kuwaiti stock exchanges signed an accord yesterday to begin cross-listing shares next year, and officials said they hoped the Bahraini, Omani and Moroccan exchanges would soon join the deal,

Kuwaiti Stock Exchange director-general Hisham Oteibi said the accord could lead to the creation of "one huge Arab stock exchange."

The heads of the three exchanges and the secretary-general of the Union of Arab Stock Exchanges, who signed the accord, will set up a committee to draft regulations for the three markets in accordance with international standards.

The Arab investor will have an easier time investing, transferring and securing his investment under this legal umbrella," Oteibi said. "Cross-listing will take place as soon as we create a unified clearing, settlement and custody institution and provide cross agreements between brokerage firms. That's exactly the job of the committee."

Oteihi said a bill opening Kuwaiti markets to foreign investors would be a priority on the agenda of the oew Kuwaiti parliament to be elected on October 7. "We have started taking steps towards allowing foreign investors to trade in Kuwaiti shares and the bill is in the corridors of the parliament," he said. "After the October 7 elections, it will be voted."

Sa'faq Rukeibi, secretary-general of the Union of Arab Stock Exchanges, had said he expected cross-listing to start in 1997.

THERE was an 18-percent drop in the number of bed nights in hotels by foreigners in July and August, but this was compensated in part by Israelis staying in botels, the Central Bureau of Statistics said

According to the bureao, bed nights by Israelis rose 9% during July and August from the same months last year, resulting in a drop of only 3% in the number of hotel bed nights during the summer. However, since there were 4% more hotel rooms, the average drop in occupancy rates was 6%-7%. In Jerusalem and Tel Aviv, which both depend oo foreign tourism, the overall drop in bed nights was 12%

Eilat hoteliers warn deterioration in security would harm winter season and 8% respectively. In Eilat, where most guests in the summer are Israelis, there were 11% fewer bed nights by foreign tourists and 12% more bed nights by Israelis, resulting in 9% more overall bed nights than last summer.

The Hotel Association said yesterday it saw in the summer's statistics a sign of hope that the drop in the number of tourists visiting Israel was beginning to ease up. The association pointed out that there was a decrease of 14% in the number of foreign bed nights in August, compared to a drop of 22% during July and 15% in June.

Meanwhile, Eilat's hoteliers denied widespread press reports that the town was in a tourist slump, but at the same time warned that their positive prognosis for the coming winter season depended on the security situation and the way Israel appeared in the media.

In a special press conference in Tel Aviv earlier this week, held following numerous reports of lagging occupancy rates for the holidays, Eilat Hotel Association Chairman Aharon Dekel said that Eilat expected about 190,000 visitors from abroad during 1996-1997 sea-son, compared to 173,000 last year.

An average of 48 flights a week are expected. Of these, 40 flights a week are to be direct charter flights to Uvda Airfield, with the remainder El Al continuing flights via Ben-Gurion Airport.

Last year tourism to Eilat suffered not only as a result of the murder of Yitzhak Rabin, terrorist attacks and fighting in Lebanon, but also due to an earthquake. Tourism sources abroad stressed that predictions would only be fulfilled if the security situation remained quiet.

The Tourism Ministry and the Eilat Hotel Association are investing $3 million in a marketing campaign abroad, which began earlier this month.

Osem to buy Tnuva ice cream plant

OSEM Industries has signed an agreement in principle to buy 51 percent of Touva's ice cream plant for $30 million, the company informed the Tel Aviv Stock Exchange yesterday. According to the agreement, the two firms will establish a new company to develop and distribute ice cream. The new firm will consolidate the activities of Tena Noga and Snowcrest, which merged several months ago.

The new firm is expected to take advantage of the Swiss Nestle company's know-how and advanced production techniques and add Nestle's products to Truva's ice cream line. Nestle invested in Osem earlier this year. The new firm will pay Truva about $30m. for Snowcrest and Tena Noga's assets. The annual sales turnover of Soowcrest and Tena Noga are estimated at $50m. Together, the two firms hold about 30% of the ice cream market. The transaction is subject to the monopolies and mergers commissioner at the Industry and Trade Ministry. Osem's announcement led to a 2.5% rise to the company's shares on the Tel Aviv Stock Exchange.

Osem and Thuva started negotiations about six months ago in reaction to the growing competition in the local ice cream market. During the last few years, the local market has suffered from the entry of various US and EU importers. including Ben & Jerry's and, more recently,

Contractors to seek other sources of capital in NY

A DELEGATION of contractors and builders wants to explore alternative sources of capital to back real estate projects at the October Business Conference in New York following local banks' exhaustion of their lending ability to the sector. The delegation, headed by

Association of Contractors and Builders in Israel president Mordechai Youa, will include two advisers - former finance minister Yitzhak Moda'i and Jerusalem Bank deputy chairman David

GALIT LIPKIS BECK The delegation will attempt to raise capital for the construction sector, especially long-term capital. According to the Bank of Israel's regulations, banks can only extend more than 20 percent of their credit portfolio to any one sector if they set aside provisions for doubtful debt. It is estimated that the banks' existing credit backing to the sector has reached 22% of the banks' total credit portfolio. Previously, Supervisor of Banks

Ze'ev Abeles warned the banks that new limitations will be imposed if they continue to exceed the 20%

At the conference, the participants plan to encourage investors to invest in the local real estate field. The delegation is scheduled to meet with senior representatives of many US firms, as well as financial iostitutions that have expressed interest in investing in projects. The delegation will also meet with public companies that have expressed interest in helping develop land in areas of high demand.

Tenerife gets 1-1 draw to reach UEFA Cup second round

DEREK FATTAL, ORI LEWIS and agencies

THE ashen demeanor of the face of Maccabi Tel Aviv coach Avraham Grant portrayed the tale of his side following its 1-1 draw against Spain's Tenerife in last night's stirring UEFA Cup first round, second-leg encounter at the National Stadium, that saw the Tel Avivians exit the competition 4-3 on aggregate losers.

Once again Maccabi ended agonizingly close to registering a spectacular victory in Europe, but as in previous years against FC Bruges, Weder Bremen, Grasshopper Zurich and in last month's bout against Fenerbahce of Istanbul, Israel's top club side just could not summon the solitary goal that would have carried it through to the next round.

The Israelis made the naive mistake of falling behind the end of a lethargic first period, but were restored to life by one of the best goals goals seen at Ramat Gan for many a year, by Gadi Brumer in the 49th minute. From then on, the match turned into a breathless contest as Maccabi powered forward against the visitors.

Armed with two precious away goals scored in the first leg played in Tenerife, Maccabi's task was simply to register e 1-0 or 2-1 result 10 get into Friday's draw that would have placed it in the hat against the likes of crack sides like Newcastle United and

Although Grant defended his match tacdes after the game, the Israelis paid the price at the end of the first half for surrendering the initiative to the Spaniards, who were then able to dictate the flow of the play.

The Tcl Avivians contented themselves with letting Tenerifc come forward to within the 35meter range before meeting the visitors head on. As a result, Tel Aviv's most dangerous plays came from breakaway moves from deep in its defense rather than purposeful attacking huild ups.

After Meccahi had weathered several scares from the Spanisb attack, it came as little surprise when its back line was expertly dissected in the 44th minute through a subtle wall pass move between Minjanbres Felipe and Dorado Vivar that enabled Vivar to plant the ball beyood Alexander Obarov to put his side 1-0 ahead. For the second time in this tie, Maccabi conceded a first goal in the dying momeots of the first half. Tenerife went 1-0 in the first in the first leg two weeks ago. The mood amongst the 15,000 supporters on the terraces during the break was totally defeatist, as the aggregate scoreline stood at 4-2 in the visitors' favor.

Grant's men were made of stemer stuff, however, and came out of the tunnel full of fight for the next 45 minutes.

Three minutes after the restart, an adventurous run hy Nir Sivilia on the left wing ended with the ball at the feet of Ya'acov Hillel whose shot thundered against the boardings on the left of Marcelo Ojeda's goal after sailing close to

Then came Brumer's bombshell from over 30 meters. An innocent enough looking ball came on the bounce to the young center-half who unleashed a shot that seemed to employ the latest cruise missile technology as it hurtled in e split second into the back of Oreja's net. The goal was among the best scored in a night of action across Brumer's strike changed the whole complexion of the match, as suddenly the Tel Avivians began to believe that they could seize the winner. A mere two minutes later, Eli Driks should have done just that as he was put through with just Ojeda to beat. The Maccabi veteran's shot was saved by the sprawling Tenerife goalkeeper and Driks sent the rebound goalwards again only to be denied once more by the athlet-

By now the atmosphere was electric as the previously sub-ducd crowd hayed the Tel Avivians on.

In the 58th minute Sivilia had a great opportunity to put the bosts ahead from short range but fired wide as the Canary Islanders began to panic in defense.

German-born coach Jup Heinekes made a double substitution bringing oo Australian Haurellio Vidmar to replace the ineffectual Bosnian striker Mejo Kodro upfroot, and added Oliver Neuville in place of Antooio Pinilla in midfield. The fresh legs bolstered the visitors but Brumer threatened again in the 65th minute as he made an incisive run up the left flank only to see his crisp shot gathered by Ojeda.

Tenerife showed that it still had some fire of their own as Felipe and Neuville both carved out scoring opportunities, but the pressure was clearly on the Spaniards. Grant threw Ofer Mizrahi and Haim Hajaj into the fray in place to justify his introduction.

As the clock ticked away, the Tc) Avivians continued to stream forward. In the 79th minute Hillel disbelievingly buried his bead in hands after Ojeda managed to pull off a miraculous diving save at the foot of his right post to deny the Tel Aviv full back.

The dying moments saw both sides come close, as Antonio Mata and then Filipe came close for Primero leaguers. In the 88th minute the visitors took no chances setting up a wall of four men for a 35-meter range free kick from Gadi Brumer which ended in Oreja's hands.

In the final minute, Ojeda provided salvation again, foiling a Driks header from an Avi Nimni free kick which confirmed Tel

Aviv's bitter destiny.
Tenerife's coach, Jup Heinckes, was clearly satisfied with the outcome of the tie, but it was only after several tense moments during the match that he and the rest of the Spanish side knew they had managed to make it to the next round of the competition.
"We realized Maccahi would be

CSKA seeks to ruin Maccabi's Euro home opener

BRIAN FREEMAN

CSKA MOSCOW comes into tonight's Euro League game against host Maccabi Tel Aviv at a crossroads.

Is the club on course to return to its glory days, when the mere name of the team sent shivers through every opponent? Or is CSKA too overwhelmed by the high spending of other clubs to keep up with the new powerhouses of Europe?

On the one hand, CSKA, winner of four European titles, has successfully rebuilt itself. The team emerged from a demise following the fall of the Soviet Union to reach the European quarter-finals two seasons ago and then the coveted Final Four last season.

But the fine core of Russian players that made up those teams has been stripped away, and the Sl.8 million budget is too small to sign marquee European or foreign players.

Gone are starters Vassilij Karassev (to Efes Pilsen), Evgueny Kissurine (to Cibona Zagreb). Gundars Vetra (to Galatasaray of Turkey) and Julius Nwosu (signed with the Boston Celtics).

These players, who lost in last season's European semifinals to eventual champion Panathinaikos, were four of the team's top five scorers and included its top two

However, those losses have been offset somewhat by the addition of Russian national team point guard Serguei Bazarevich, super-forward Valeri Daineko (both from Dynamo Moscow), and Alexandre Goutorov from Daineko was the third leading scorer at 22.5 points a game in last season's secondary European Cup tournament and Bazarevich was the top playmaker with an 8.0 assist average. Together, they led Dynamo Moscow to a place in the semifinals before losing to eventual champion Taugres.

Returning from last year's CSKA squad is guard Igor Koudelin, who was the team's main threat from three-point range last season at 48 percent (59-123) during the championships.

However, in CSKA's 72-67 loss hroadcast live of last week to Panionios in Athens ing at 8:45 p.m.

in their Euro League opener Koudelin was only 2-9 (22.2%) from behind the arc and the team was a dismal 3-18 (16.7%), This was in sharp contrast to one of the team's strengths last season, when it averaged seven three-pointers out of 16 attempts (43.8%) each

The other main returnees are frontcourt players Serguei Panov (who led CSKA with 19 points and 7 rebounds in the loss to Panionios), Nikita Morgunov and Andrej Komev.

Head coach Stenislav Yarimaz. who was a star point guard for the team in his playing days and is now in his fifth year at the helm. has made it clear the sweeping changes make it difficult for the team to get.

This problem is exacerbated by the clubs' two new Americans, Marcus Webh and Edmond Wilson, who both had CBA experience last season but are still rounding into shape. Webh scored only 11 points in 19 minutes of play in the loss to Panionios. Wilson, who was only recently signed, did not even play in that game.

Center Igor Kourashov has also returned, but is injured and did not make the trip to Tel Aviv with the Maccabi, fresh off its opening win last week in Limoges despite a less-than-stellar performance, hopes to improve on its play in its first home game of the Euro League. In addition to the backing of an expected sold-out crowd, the health of Derek Sharp, who was injured last week and did not play, has improved significantly.

Maccabi is 7-4 all-time against CSKA in the championships, including the 1977 victory in Virton that not only put Maccabi "on the map" as a basketball power but also transformed the team into a symbol of Jewish tri-

THE last time Racing Paris saw Jerusalem, it was on the wrong end of an Adi Gordon overtime jump shot that clinched a 92-91 victory for Jerusalem in 1991. Last night it was teammate Dan Bingheimer who supplied the late heroics, as coach Pini Gersbon's club solidified its position in its group with an 80-74 triumph over the under-

The victory gave Jerusalem a 2-0 record in its group, and a good chance to advance to the next round in the tournament.

Racing Paris coach Chris Singleton could be excused for seeing triple at the end of the first half. In one of its most potent offensive displays ever, Hapoel hit seven of 11 three-pointers in the stanza to take a 56-42 lead, led by Bingheimer, who had two

However, while Dacoury was supplying all of his team's offense early, Hapoel had other weapons in its arsenal, and three-pointers by Motti Daniel, Papi Turgeman and Doron Shefa in quick succession boosted Jerusalem to an early 27-22

After Shefa scored again to give Jerusalem a 33-24 advantage, the game suddenly shifted when Dacoury was called for a flagrant foul and then tossed out with just over seven minutes left, for getting overly physical with Hapoel's Pini Levy under the boards.

Two quick threes hy reserve Frank Meriguet got them within eight, while Reid and Risacher controlled the boards. Meanwhile, Hapoel's powder went dry, with no one able to hit a shot, least of all Shefa, who misfired several times to put Racing back in the race.

Reserve guard Arsen Ade Mensah also contributed, bitting a three-pointer and then another shot before a long bomb by Risacher suddenly brought the French back from the dead at 73-72, with 2:30 left.

But Bingheimer, who got the club started in the first half, jumpstarted them again, scoring inside and then taking a pass from Turgeman to stretch the lead to 78-74. A tired Risacher missed two key foul shots, and

United cruised to a comfortable 2-0 European Cup win over Rapid Vienna of Austria yesterday with first half goals from Ole Soiskjacr and David Beckham. The English side, outclassed in their opening Champions' League Group C match against Juventus two weeks ago, enjoyed almost total domination in the opening period against the lackluster Austrians but eased up after going two goals clear. Norwegian Solskjaer opened the scoring in the 20th minute when he slid in a low right wing cross from Roy Keane at the far post.

Seven minutes later Beckham made it two when he took advantage of a poor beck pass by Krzystof Ratajczyk, scoring on his second attempt.

Group A In Glasgow: Glasgow Rangers (Scotland) 1, Auxerre (France) 2 (0-0). Scorers: Glasgow Rangers – Paul Gascolgne (71st). Auxerre – Thomas Denlaud (54th, 68th).

Tyson gives up WBC title

TOTOWA, New Jersey (AP) -Mike Tyson has relinquished bis WBC beavyweight championship rather than face No. 1 contender Lennox Lewis, promoters Dino Duva and Panos Eliades said.

Mcanwhile, the WBC said Tuesday from Mexico City that its board of governors is still voting to determine whether it will accept Tyson's decision to give up the title. The organization said 26 of 32 votes have been received and are in favor of accepting Tyson's request

Eliades and Duva, who co-promote Lewis, and the WBC said a purse bid for a championship fight between Lewis and No. 2 contender Oliver McCall will be held today in Mexico City. Tyson had an agreement to give up the WBC title as soon as he stopped Bruce Seldon to win the

of a binding contract signed by Tyson and promoter Don King ARIE PALOGE - QUALITY CARS: agreed to give up the WBC title as part of a deal in which Lewis also accepted a $4 million compensation payment to step aside.

Dacoury burt the French badly, while Levy, having already disposed of Dacoury, also had some fine baskets underneath and two superb passes, the second setting np Billy Thompson for a dunk underneath that made it 45-28

However, Jerusalem fans have every right to wonder what happened in the second half. Apparently tired after having to play its fourth game in less than two weeks, coach Pini Gershon's club seemed to wilt in the second Group B In Lodz: Widzew Lodz (Poland) 1. Atletico Madrid (Spain) 4 (2-1). Scorers: Widzew – Marek Citko (45th). Atletico – Milinko Pantic (24th), Diego Simeone (32nd, 60th), Kiko (61st). stanza as Racing Paris - playing without injured former Laker guard Sedale Threatt and two other starters - put np a fight worthy of the French Foreign Legion.

SERGEI Hanukaev leads the Jerusalem Symphony Orchestra in a concert today (1) at the Henry Crown Symphony Hall in Jerusalem playing the suite Rome by Bizet, and Mordechai Seter's Hagut while Mezzo-sograno Svetiana Sandler sings arias by Handel. Tehaikovsky and Verdi.

Tomorrow (II a.m.) at the Ticho House annex of the Israel Museum in Jerusalem, cellist Alexander Sinielnikov, violinist Yuri Glukhovsky and pianist Gabriela Talrose play trios by Brahms and Mendelssohn. Saturday (8:30) soloists of the International Biblical Orchestra Hallelujah perform at the Bible Lands Museum Jerusalem music by Bach, Handel and Vivaldi. Wine and cheese are served at 8.

Harpsiebordist Zvi Meniker plays Bach's Goldberg Variations Saturday (8:30) at the Jerusalem Music Center as part of the annual Early Music Workshop.

The Haifa Symphony Orchestra helps celebrate the Haifa Film Festival with musical selections from Star Wars, Gone with the Wind, Exodus, Lawrence of Arabia, Dr. Zhivago, E.T., Indiana Jones and others. While the orchestra plays, excerpts from the films will be projected on huge screens. Saturday (8:30) at the Haifa Auditorium.

auditions lolling in the parlor and trading catty jibes. One of the director's better-known films, its spiked dialogue and spontaneous performances still seem remarkably fresh today, and its combination of supple wit and looming sadness serve as a fine introduction to La Cava's work, which is featured in a special retrospective at this year's festival. (Saturday 9:30 p.m., Haifa Cinematheque)

Spanish director Alejandro Amenabar's Thesis is a black but lively thriller about a Madrid student whose academie research on Violence in the Cinema becomes life-threateoing when she uncovers a ring of snuff- filmmakers shooting their murderous movies at ber very own university. While its dark commentary on voyeurism and movie-gore rings a little disingenuous, considering the thrill-and-chill techniques that Amenabar himself appropriates with such apparent glee, the picture is fun in a twisted way.

If anything, it serves as an ironic stab at the academy and the distance that film theorists often try to maintain between their ideas and their gut reactions. (Saturday, 11 p.m., Haifa Cinematheque)

IAF planes blast Hizbullah targets north of zone

DAVID RUDGE

IAF warplanes blasted Hizbullah targets north of the security zone yesterday, as the committee monitoring the Operation Grapes of Wrath understandings concluded discussions on the recent wave of fighting in south Lebanon.

The five-nation committee, composed of representatives from the US, France, Israel, Syria and Lebanon, issued a joint statement after its three-day sessioo last night, calling on all the sides to avoid endangering civilians.

Earlier, while the committee was still meeting at UNIFIL's headquarters in Nakoura, Hizbullah gunmen fired light weapons at a South Lebanese Army position io the Rehan area, in zone's eastern sector. There were no casualties in the mortar attack, and IDF and SLA gunners returned fire.

About an hour later, IAF warplanes went into action against Hizbullah targets in the J'bal Saffi area, north of the zone.

The IDF Spokesman said raid was carried out as a result of terrorist activity in the area, such as the long-range attack earlier on the SLA outpost.

The spokesman said the target hit was used as a firing position by the terrorists. The pilots reported accurate hits and all the planes returned safely to their bases, the statement said.

Reports from Lehanon said warplanes fired four missiles at targets near Louwaizeh village. There were no immediate reports of any casualties.

The raid yesterday followed two separate air strikes against Hizbullah targets in the I'bal Saffi area during fierce exchanges last Thursday, after a clash in which two IDF soldiers were killed and eight others wounded.

Four Hizbullah gunmen were killed and several others reported wounded in the same encounter.

Warplanes struck again at targets in the same region on Saturday following a Hizbullah Sagger anti-tank missile attack on an IDF mechanized patrol in which an officer was lightly

Yesterday, the Grapes of Wrath monitoring committee concluded its discussions which began on Sunday into complaints lodged by Israel and Lebanon over hreaches of the understandings during last Thursday's fighting.

The committee also discussed additional complaints from Lebanon over two IDF smoke rounds which hit Arab Salim village during exchanges on Tuesday. Lehanon also complained about the expulsion of two families from the security zone. Israel is to give its response to this matter at a later date.

Israel charged that Hizbullah had breached the understandings first by firing from inside villages and that the IDF's return fire at the source of the shooting was in self-defense.

In its agreed statement, the committee acknowledged the fact that firing from inside and into villages did endanger civilians and should be avoided as much as possible.

The committee called on all the sides to refrain from undisciplined firing which endangered civilians directly or indirectly and to show restraint in military operations in the proximity of resideotial areas.

Meanwhile, the Golani Brigade, as part of its summer training, staged a routine exercise on the Golan Heights with the armor, artillery and engineers corps. Part of the exercise was to examine the capabilities and preparedness of the brigade in a defensive battle on the Golan. At the end of the exercise, the brigade returned to its base.

Kurds in Israel threatened with prosecution for visiting homeland

THE Kurdish community in Israel has been asked to refrain from visiting Kurdistan and any Israeli who travels there faces prosecution, members of the community said.

The warning came from Brig-Gen. Yigal Pressler, the prime minister's adviser on terrorism. At least five Israeli citizens were in the Kurdish capital of Irbil during the Iraqi-backed invasion earlier this month. All managed to slip away without being captured and have reportedly returned.

Security sources say that while this time the visits to ancestral homelands ended without mishap, these trips to enemy countries are very dangerous.

"Traveling to this part of the world by Israeli citizens is forbidden and dangerous at a normal time, but even more so today when there is a war going on and Iraqi troops are there," Pressler said.

Earlier this year, Pressler requested leaders of the Kurdish communities in Israel urge their people not to visit Kurdistan. Israelis started trickling to Kurdistan, which is spread out among five countries, following the Gulf war, when Iraqi forces were barred by the allies from northern Iraq.

The area has been torn by civil war among rival Kurdish groups, but was recently overrun by the Iraqi army. Shalom Khamami, chairman of the Iranian-Kurdish Descendants Organization, said he and other leaders in the Kurdish Jewish communities in Israel participated in a meeting with Pressler a few months ago.

"Pressler asked us to discourage our people from traveling to Kurdistan. He told us, and rightly so, to do it quietly so that there was no panic, and we did." Khamami said. He said the word was put out at synagogues and in the Kurdish communities to refrain from traveling there, and that a lot of people heeded the warning.

Khamami said the Kurds were an unpredictable lot and could just as easily hold an Israeli visitor hostage as they would open their house to him. He said there were virtually no Jews left in Kurdistan and that Israelis visiting the region were either middle aged Kurds who wanted to return to their childhood villages, or the young who sought adventure in the land of their grandparents.

The route to Kurdistan is through Turkey and is hardly patrolled since no Iraqi forces are allowed in the semiautocomous region. People can pass through with case, Khamami said.

Pressler has called on the police to prosecute any Kurdish immi-grant who embarks on such a dangerous and illegal tour.

Yehuda Weinstein and Uri Wagman. petitioned the High Court of Justice last week to postpone the trial. Their main argument was that they soil have not received from the District tomey's Office all relevant presdution evidence, including tapes. files and other testimonies, such as evidence of private investigator Rafi Friedan, who is charged with carrying out the wiretapping. e lawvers also argued were not prepared to begin the trial yesterday as scheduled with the testimonies of prosecution wimesses since they have not received ins investigation material regarding senior Yedior personnel, who were recently questioned under caution on suspicion of commissioning wiretaps.

Evidence given by Yedior publisher Noni Mozes, the daily's security officer Haim Roseoberg and private investigator Zeev Laufer (who has testified to police against them) is relevant to Nimrodi's trial, the lawyers said. They are expected to accuse Yedion of executing many of the offenses with which Nimrodi and Ronen are charged. The absence of such evidence will severely damage the defense, the lawyers said.

The High Court and the defense reached a compromise on Tuesday wherehy the trial would go ahead yesterday, but without the prosecution witnesses and that the defense would give its pre-trial motions.

Weinstein said in court he has asked State Attorney Edna Arbel to set a ruling on cellular phone wiretapping, following a Magistrates' Court judge's recent decision which acquitted a defendant on such charges. Several charges against Nimrodi and Ronen pertain to commissioning the hugging of cellular phones, and the defense wish to prove that these are not criminal offenses. Defense lawyers also wish to obtain a ruling whether fax-bugging comes under the same category as cellular phones.

The next hearing in the trial was set for October 28.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Foreign workers set up churches sprung up in Israel, especially in the Tel Aviv area, to serve foreign workers, according to Uri Mor, director of the Religious Affairs Ministry's department for Christian communities. . Mor said many of the churches have been set up in shops, warehouses or storerooms rented by the communities involved. The ministry becomes aware of these churches when its leaders ask for visas, he said. Among the most prominent groups are Pentecostalists from Nigeria and Ghana and other Protestants from the Philippines and Korea, Haim Shapiro

The eclipse will reach its peak at

Dirani has detention extended

Eighteen Lebanese security detainees, including Mustafa Dirani, who reportedly sold navigator Ron Arad to Iranians, were brought before Tel Aviv District Court yesterday to have their detentions extended.

In the behind-closed-doors session, the judge rejected a request by the detainees' lawyer that the censorship on the case be partially lifted. Senior IDF officials testified before the court as to the reasons the 18 must be held. According to media reports, Israel abducted the detainees. Itim

Horev hearing postponed

A hearing on two bereaved parents' request that Col. Moni Horev be suspended as head of the IDF Officers' Training School was postponed for the fourth time yesterday, when Supreme Court Justice Dalia Domer decided that since the petition against Horev's appointment will be heard on October 27, this panel might as well discuss their request for an interim injunction against his continued tenure as well. The petition was filed by Masoud and Aliza Shoshan, whose son Yanai was killed in an army training accident two years ago. Horev, who was Yanai's brigade commander, was indieted for negligence leading to the death. Evelyn Gordon

Immigrant tax break rules revised

The reduction in purchase taxes for new immigrants who buy houses has been partially canceled for houses worth more than NIS 900,000. Previously, immigrants paid a tax of only 0.5% instead of 4.5%, no manier how expensive a house they bought. Under new rules approved by the Knesset Finance Committee yesterday, however, immigrants will pay the full 4.5% on that portion of the purchase price which exceeds NIS 900,000. Evelyn Gordon

Discount Bank brokers convicted

SIX former Discount Bank senior employees were convicted of stock Aviv District Court Judge Amnon Strashnov yesterday.

Private investor and businessman Michael Oron and his daughter Rinat were acquitted on all

The six are: consultation manag-Ofer Heldstein: David Weimman, broker at the bank's llanot Discount investment company; lianot dealer Efraim Kochinsky; Mordechai Merkado. who oversaw the bank's transactions at the Tel Aviv Stock Exchange; Ehud Ys'acov, Merkado's deputy; and investor Arye Adler, who joined the others in manipulating stocks for personal profits. The six said they would appeal the conviction.

An additional Discount Bank employee, Yitzhak Cohen, who turned prosecution witness, already was sentenced and is serv-

All of the defendants were arrested in 1994 by Securities Authority investigators. They were accused of conspiring to and carrying out stock manipulation, netting personal profits of millions of shekels. They were also accused of fraud and breach of trust.

During the trial, Strashnov accused the defendants of "playing innocent" and pretending not to understand the charges despite their former status and sophistication. "Some of the defendants underestimated their own intelligence to such an extent that it is difficult to understand how they were appointed to such senior positions at the bank," Strashnov said in convicting them.

The defendants had maintained their innocence, arguing that there was no criminal inteot in their actions and that they did not reap personal gain or profit. However, Strashnov found them guilty on all

The prosecution had argued that the conspiracy to defraud the stock investing public by abusing their lofty positions was a carefully planned and sophisticated scam. The gang, the prosecution said, hought certain shares using personal hank accounts and their knowledge of the Stock Exchange. They then artificially raised the shares by creating a demand and sold them to Discount Bank

Heldstein kept up to 40 percent of the profits, and the rest were divided between the others involved. Some NIS 5 million in profits were reaped, the prosecution argued. Some of the defendants had confessed to the offenses during questioning, but changed their stance in court.

Pre-sentencing arguments will be heard next month.

Court reinstates some of fraudster's prison rights

CONVICTED fraudster Avi Golan had some of his privileges reinstated by a Tel Aviv District Court judge yesterday. The Prisons Service had repealed them after Golan, serving a 10-yearsentence, gave two newspaper interviews

Golan, who lost an appeal to the Supreme Court two years ago to allow him to write a weekly column for an Ashdod paper, was interviewed this year while working outside prison as part of a rehabilitation program.

The Prisons Service had forbidden him from being interviewed.

but Golan went ahead, arguing that he talked to the press while he was outside the prison. lo his interviews, he slammed prison conditions. Golan also accused the Prisons Service of allowing gangsters serving sentences to actually run the prison.

He was disciplined, put in solitary confinement for two weeks, banned from furloughs for two months and taken off the rehabilitation program. In yesterday's appeal to the disCivil Rights in Israel lawyer Dan Yakir, he asked Judge Avraham Baiser to overturn the Prisons Service punishment.

Baiser canceled the Prisons Service decision to take away Golan's furlough rights and ruled that the prisoner be returned to the rehabilitation program. The pun-ishment handed out by the Prisons Service was too harsh, said

Four years ago, Golan failed to return from a furlough, and went on a spending spree using forged checks worth tens of thousands of
